MY DREAM OF BECOMING A TEACHER

It is said that you cannot choose your mother and father and that they are the most significant figures in every person's life. There are a few such powerful models as their parents. The teacher is one of them. The trend for more and more parents to intervene and when the choice of teachers in question only confirms how important it is to be the person who will grow the child's first knowledge, which is why the teacher asks for the relationship. Such an important choice does not leave its destiny. When you cannot already choose the parents, you can do the teacher. It is the person who is waiting for every man in one of the most important days of his life - when he goes to school. That is why it is the event for the reception of the champion and the solemn presentation of the teacher. And the moment of excitement when the director of the school excuses the number of each department, and then who the teacher takes which class is the day everyone is up to for the rest of their lives. Like when you enroll in high school, you take the first exam, get the first job, and become a parent. What parents are at home is a teacher at school. It ties the pupils shoes until they learn it alone, borrow steam for snacks when Mom forgets to make a sandwich, rubbing her baby when she cries because it has fallen and hurt the knee ... If teachers, teachers and professors are so important, why do we want them tough? Why are people educating and forming a nation stranded in the gloom? And on the other hand, we sometimes expect too many of them. The teacher after the parents is the most important figure for the identity of the child, who transfers the value system. To children are often teachers more important than parents themselves. "You know when the children say, you have no idea, the teacher did not say so'. The children are extremely attached to their teachers, and the school is like an extended family. A good teacher, teacher or professor recognizes the talents, abilities and problems that the child has. This is because the child is spending most time with the teacher. In high school, the child decides to study if she is fascinated by her professor. Today's teachers and professors have less enthusiasm. He simply splinted and fewer people dedicated to that profession. That's understandable. And it did not go now, it lasts long. A man with existential problems cannot be happy, dedicated to giving the children enough love. That is why it is important that society recognizes, respects, and reduces the prices of educated workers and recognizes the value of the school. The teacher should be competent, not nervous and frustrated. To do that, it should be: first of all, love and responsibility for the exalted and responsible profession that is its first choice, and the children / parents are learning to recognize the dinners; a decent permanent source of income. Namely, the state recognizes the value of education for the advancement of society in its entirety and invests in education, ie teachers by determining their personal income, but also the way of taking (without public humiliation from the government we have long attended); secured, funded permanent and quality education and constant reminiscence of boy's predation and subject methodology (through seminars), professional information (introducing information technology). In the construction of the dignity of the profession, every teacher, the teacher for himself and his attitude, love for the profession, the relationship with the disciples and the competent knowledge and their moral attitude, is significantly affected. But on public opinion, the parents and some students have the influence and attitude of the ministry and the government, which through their evaluation of the work of teachers and constant public perception and humiliation contribute to the decline of the reputation of the profession in order to cover their own weaknesses. As someone who positively influences, inspires, and motivates his students when he thinks about how to work with children, and as he sees his role in this, he points out that it is precisely her students who positively influence and inspire and motivate her". "Most teachers choose the profession because they like to help others. [This is a job that a person] is obliged to positively influence the lives of children. Although some teachers may have the impression that their work is easy, they can be filled with obstacles, such as problems such as too many students in the classroom, overloading on heavy administrative jobs, irresponsible students, and low income. Challenges associated with this call can be particularly great in schools in large urban environments, with almost no difference in the country. Drugs, crime, free morality, and sometimes parental disinterest are having a bad impact on the school atmosphere and discipline among students. Rebellion has taken a stomach everywhere. Why then do many capable people decide for that occupation? What motivates me? Love for children. I know that I can be the only support for some children.

MY DREAM OF BECOMING A TEACHER

His teacher implies love for the profession, that is, the children who come to school for the first time, meet for the first time with the teachers, the school table and are for the first time in a collective with twenty and more students. If during this first contact you do not get children to love school, I do not think you have achieved what the teacher should do. A good teacher is a warm, accessible person full of enthusiasm, which is particularly expected in the first grade. Communication skills need to be tailored to the age of first grade students. First class teachers are expected to be, organized, patient, compassionate, kind, noble. To easily forgive. Some will surely say that the described teacher is only a myth that in reality does not exist, but with all the love and effort it is possible to achieve this ideal. When the teacher comes into the classroom, especially if we are talking about the first class, he draws away his feelings of dissatisfaction, drowsiness and helplessness from his personality, so that his knowledge, experience, zeal, love of his disciples and his call and much good will remain in it. Wide smile, warm atmosphere, lots of games, different activities, well-established rules, insisting on respecting them, are the key to good intercourse with first grade students. A good teacher is moderately demanding; exaggerated complexity can discourage students, and over-indulgence may slow down and lead to undisciplined behavior. The importance of the first day of the school for children is so deeply engraved in the memory of the parents, because it is the day they wanted to admit it or not to become aware of the child's growing up. Become part of that new family, is the most beautiful privilege. Departing a child to school is one of the most important moments in his life and the life of his parents. Child education and education becomes a common concern for schools and parental homes in achieving a common goal, which is a happy and educated child. The one who looks at the clock, to pass an hour, I think she has fallen into the classroom and at school. This job has to be loved and with all the heart to enter it, to be aware that every day you need to learn further and constantly be in the course of new discoveries, to be professionally trained, both in your profession and in general. Those children who are entrusted should be well acquainted with each individual, should understand them, help them, counsel them, educate and educate. It's not that easy. This is a complex and above all responsible job because it helps to 'create' people, but above all this is the most beautiful profession in the world. A child is a pearl that is unwilling to teach a teacher who will unveil his hidden and unfamiliar splendor, and the quality of the teacher is measured by the number of deceased children's smiles. Teachers are sorcerers and the truth is that they are sometimes unaware of it. The parents of the pupils of the champions give their teacher a sincere confidence, giving him his highest preciousness, unshaven pearl, in expert hands. The teacher has the freedom to purify this pearl by educating and creating the foundation of a future adult personality. Is not that a sorcery? And not only that, it is also a privilege, and the quality of the teacher is measured by the number of deceased children's smiles. Smiles are most easily stimulated by praising for every effort invested and for each and every least, and that is what it is, what it is doing, what it is doing and what it's like to be better than itself compared to yesterday. If children are taught by a teacher who inspires and motivates, there is no lesson that is inconceivable and there is no case that is difficult and boring. Naturally, such a teacher finds ways of motivation and inspiration, tries to bring in innovations, learn from other colleagues, independently prepare teaching resources, to create daily and build an incentive environment for learning. It is not easy to achieve, it is easy for several months, but after it is diminished, it is therefore necessary to truly give in to our invitation, to love it, and to pump energy on student joys. Whoever does not know so, he has fallen into the world of education. I always remember my schooling and mathematics, which made me troubled during the elementary school. I always had a fifth, but I always got oblique that I did not understand the best, I did not practice enough, I could do better. In the beginning I suffered, and later I reconciled with the fact that I do not have the gift for this subject and that is the worst thing that can happen to a pupil. By going to high school, besides a professor who knew and motivated and inspired me, I was a student who went to mathematical competitions.

That is why I love and choose this profession, and will strive to do all the best for my pupils.
